An Adventure with a "California fion." A gentleman, who went out to Southern California years ago for his health, told me SUMMER AT BRENGLE'S. of a remarkable experience with this same stealthy animal. With a friend he was out trout-fishing in a wild canon among the The old, reliable CONFECTIONERY OF HEN-BY BRENGLE. No. 531 King street, is ready, and will supply summer delicacies the season through. Each berry and fruit served with Cream of varied flavors at the lowest price and as good mountians. The gentleman, whom we will call Mr. A., had taken his friend, a stranger to the region, into the mountains, intending to give him a chance to catch to speckled beau ties and perhaps to shoot a deer or two. They had their rifles with them, and the friend was sitting on the bank of the stream as ever.

Havifle was leaning against a tree several feet away. A little cur dog, called "Lady," had accom-panied them, and she was indulging in a hunt on her own account. She soon found the dog's proverbial enemy, a cat, but one for which peer little Lady would have made scarcely two mouthfuls. Yelping, she ran and jumped into Mr. A.'s arms; when, to his astonishment, an enormous mountain lion came bounding out of the woods after her. He sat motionless and almost petrified, but did not lose his presence of mind. The beast was too near for him to get to his rifle, and, by a sort of instinct, he felt that his only chance was to keep his eyes on those of the lion. Evidently it had been so intent > brought it to within about five feet of Mr. A. Then it stopped short, braced itself, and glared at its human foe. Mr. A., with his hand on a long hunting knife in his belt, looked the enraged animal steadily in its eyes, while Lady cowered in his lap. Every hair on the lion seemed to stand out straight, which gaze it a most ferocious appearance. For a moment it was difficult to say what the creature would do; although if Mr. A. had made the slightest movement, or a motion as if intending to shrink away, or had failed for a moment in his steady stern gaze, the lion would undoubtedly have spring upon him. It is wonderful how the mind acts at such a time and how swift and curious are its impressions. While intensely conscious of an extremity of danger, he was also aware of the ludicrous action of his friend who, instead of shooting the beast was jumping up and down in an ecstasy of terror, shouting "shoo!" "scat!" as though the lion was nothing more formidable than a big tom cat. It was well, perhaps, that he took this course, for unless a cool, steady aim had put a bullet through the brain, it would have been so infuriated by a would that Mr. A. would have had no chance whatever. As it was, the lion's eyes faltered and wavered before the fixed gaze of man, the bristling fur went down, and then the creature wheeled and bounded off into the nearest cover. By the time Mr. A. reached his rifle it had disappeared finally .- St. Nicholas for September.

A DAKOTA BLIZZARD .- Little or no snow falls in Dakota from November to April. It is too cold to snow, and the blizzard is not a snow storm (in the ordinary sense of the word), but a cold wind which comes sweeping down from Behring Strait, with a velocity of from fifty to sixty miles an hour, bringing with it a blast of finely powdered ice. Imagine a thick fog, all of ice, blown along by a high wind; the tiny particles, coming with such velocity, sting like a blow from a whip-lash. Nothing can stand be-fore it. Those buffalo and cattle who are used to it make for the lee side of the nearest hill, haystack, or building, and huddle close together for safety, trusting to being covered by the snow, and thus kept warm; when, if the storm does not last too long, they may escape alive. You cannot see across the street from one house to another, and men have been frozen to death within a few feet of home and safety. The thermom-eter falls many degrees below zero, beyond the power of mercury to measure it; only the best spirit-thermometers can be used for these low temperatures. When going with the wind you are driven along with resistless force: it against it, you are knocked down and buffeted about; unless you are so fortunate as to find speedy help and shelter, you are almost sure to be frozen to death .-
